Since childhood, we've been led to believe that life is all about work!

It wasn't until I had my first child that I realized life isn't about work, it's about flourishing through personal development, which can be facilitated by work.

Unfortunately, many people endure work as an obligatory passage to meet their basic needs and those of their families (drinking, eating, housing, energy, etc.).

The first thing to do is to reduce these costs in two different ways 👉

Figure 4. Percentage of persons aged 12 and over reporting difficulty with work, home, or social activities due to depressive symptoms, by severity: United States, 2009–2012

NOTES: "Any difficulty" (percentage above the bar in each category) is the sum of the percentages for "some difficulty" and "serious difficulty." - Reduce these expenses to a minimum; some people spend more than necessary.
- Live in places where the cost of living is low. Change cities or even countries.

Here is a list of countries where the cost of living is low:

- Thailand
- Vietnam
- Indonesia
- Mexico
- Portugal
- Georgia
- Morocco

These are countries where it's pleasant to live, and primary needs are inexpensive if you have an online activity.

The main goal is to spend less time working for your basic needs and more time working on your personal development and that of your loved ones!

This is the difference between being a slave and fully living your life!

Don't move to these countries if your activity isn't 100% online, you risk worsening your situation!

Your activity needs to be online so you can exchange your productivity for dollars you can value in your low-cost country.

But what work can you do? 🙋

I'm a crypto guy, so I would recommend doing something in web3.

Web3 is the future and also has the highest-paying jobs.

If you have a skill in any field, you can likely apply it in web3.

In reality, the best thing is to establish your presence on internet.

Today, internet works like a resume.

Do you have a skill? Then create an account on X, TikTok, YouTube, whatever, and start sharing your knowledge and building an audience!

It's the best way to get noticed!

And even if you don't have a skill, it's not a problem, just follow these steps:

- Find a subject that interests you.
- Educate yourself and learn about this subject.
- Every time you learn something, share it with your community.

This way, your knowledge will grow along with your community.
